Period for Reply

A SHORTENED STATUTORY PERIOD FOR REPLY IS SET TO EXPIRE 3 MONTH(S) FROM THE MAILING DATE OF THIS COMMUNICATION.

- Extensions of time may be available under the provisions of 37 CFR 1.136(a). In no event, however, may a reply be timely filed after SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- If the period for reply specified above is less than thirty (30) days, a reply within the statutory minimum of thirty (30) days will be considered timely.
- If NO period for reply is specified above, the maximum statutory period will apply and will expire SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- Failure to reply within the set or extended period for reply will, by statute, cause the application to become ABANDONED (35 U.S.C. § 133). Any reply received by the Office later than three months after the mailing date of this communication, even if timely filed, may reduce any earned patent term adjustment. See 37 CFR 1.704(b).

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 11 & 18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Martin et al.

Refer to detail fig. 2 of Martin et al. A power supply B(+)1,B(-) is supplied to an input differential stage 3 and may be read as the first power supply voltage claimed while stage 3 is read as the first amplifier means or circuitry claimed as it receives an input differential signal IPS,IPS2 and generates an intermediate differential signal 1/A, 1/A comp. A power supply circuit 6 generates another set of supply voltages B(+)2,B(-)2 from the first voltage. Although a 1:1 transformer is used in the supply circuit 6, the drop across diodes D2,D3 will ensure that the B2 supply voltage is less than B1 and thus the B2 supply may be read as the second power supply voltage claimed. The B2 supply voltage is supplied to an output differential amplifier stage 5 that generates an output differential signal OUT+,OUT- from the intermediate differential signal. Thus stage 5 may be read as the second amplifier means or circuitry claimed. Since this is an audio output amplifier, it would be logical to assume it draws more current than the input stage 3.

Claims 12-17 & 19 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Claims 1-10 are allowed.

Claims 1 & 9 specify a voltage follower not shown by Martin et al., and claim 15 implies the same; the output magnitude of the output stage 5 of Martin et al. would presumably be greater than the signal fed to it as it is used as an audio output amplifier. The current source circuitry of claims 12-14 is not shown by Martin et al. It would be unlikely that the common mode voltages of the stages would differ by a predetermined amount (claim 16) or be made equal (claim 19) due to the presence of isolation network 4 between the amplifier stages.

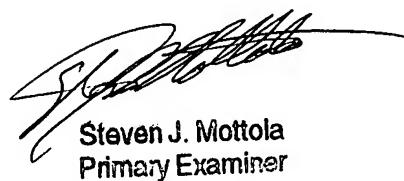

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Ausserlechner and Sevenhans et al. each disclose cascaded amplifier stages using different supplies but in each case the output stage uses a higher supply voltage.
